Background Experience

I have 20 years of teaching experience specialising in Geography across all secondary key stages. I have taught in two very different schools during this time, experiencing the full range of academic and social needs of a wide variety of students. Teaching geography has enabled me to organise and support field visits for students, giving them real world experiences of the local area, north Wales, Dorset and Iceland. I am passionate about my subject area and the unique experience it gives children. I have lead departments in both schools I have taught at and have also been a head of year and head of house. I have been a faculty director of social sciences, a role which gave me the opportunity to lead seven different subject areas from history and RE to sociology and psychology. This role has also provided me the opportunity to lead teaching and learning sessions, quality assurance and coaching and staff development.
